

HIS BONES FOUND IN THE NEPPERHAN.

THE DISAPPEARANCE OF WALTER BERNHARD,
OF YONKERS, ACCOUNTED FOR.

A mystery of Yonkers was cleared up yesterday by the finding of the body of Walter Bernhard in the Nepperhan River. On April 25, 1888, Bernhard strolled about the city, and in the evening went toward Coppett's dam. Several persons in the neighborhood heard a man call for help, and also heard a splash in the water. They rushed to the place, but could not find traces of any one having fallen into the stream. The next day Bernhard's hat was found floating upon the water. The river was dragged, but the searchers were unable to find his body. His wife and four children lived at No. 36 Vineyard-avenue. As soon as she learned that her husband disappeared, she tried to recover $500 insurance which her husband carried on his life. The insurance company, however, refused to pay her, as she could not show positive proof of his death.

Yesterday afternoon, while some workmen were cleaning out the dam on the sixth water power in the river, they dug up the bones of Bernhard, and his coat and trousers. The body had been wedged between two stones, driven at the bottom of the dam. Coppett's dam, owned by the names before mentioned. The coat was identified by Bernhard's wife. She will now try to collect the insurance money.
